COUNTY AGENTS ONLY

Those farmers who will be hiring young helpers these next few months will be interested in this tip on making sure these youngsters don't get hurt while working for you.

Most of you make a special effort to show these young people when they first come to work how to do the jobs safely. And you probably give consideration to their age and size when you assign them jobs. These are fine ways to help them to work, but the real secret in instilling safe work habits in youngsters is to set a good example yourself. When you make a conscious effort to do your own work safely around these young people your own attitude will rub off on them. They catch your safety attitude unconsciously and, almost without exception, will try to do their own jobs more safely.

Setting your own good example is a simple, yet one of the most effective, safety practices to follow with these youngsters. And besides helping these young workers do work more safely, you'll be doing something constructive for your own safety.

Savings Bonds for Freedom

"Freedom in America involves a profound respect for individual liberty, a strong determination to maintain that liberty, and to bring ourselves and others to a better life within its framework. Many Americans today are sincerely wondering what they can do to defend and preserve our freedom. They wish to contribute to our defense efforts, to our adventures in space, and to strengthening our free institutions and our traditions of liberty. The success of our efforts is based upon a strong and expanding economy. By investing part of his savings in United States Savings Bonds, an individual citizen can contribute to all of these objectives. I would like to take this opportunity to invite every American to purchase an extra share in freedom by purchasing an extra Savings Bond during the Freedom Bond Drive."—John F. Kennedy, The White House, May 1, 1962.

Postal Ruling

Effective January 1, 1963 the following regulations will govern the mailing of envelopes on and after that date.

Size, Shape and Ratio—Envelopes of all standard sizes and shapes are essential to the economical handling of mail, both by machine and manual methods. The following standards apply to envelopes.

A. Envelopes less than 3 inches in width (height) or 4¼ inches in length are non-mailable.

B. Envelopes more than 9 inches in width (height) or 12 inches in length are not recommended.

C. Envelopes having shapes other than rectangular are nonmailable.

D. Envelopes having a ratio of width (height) to length of less than 1 to 1.414 (1 to the square root of 2) are not recommended.

This advance notice will give you an opportunity to examine an inventory currently on hand that will not meet the new specifications.

Consequently, when you reorder a supply you can do so within regulations.

Apples for processing usually constitute a very small part of production in the western states, and thus one increase there will have little effect on the processing market. In the east and midwest, production is down, so processors likely will have fewer apples available. However, this situation could be reversed in Virginia if hail or seab has been severe enough to route apples normally sold fresh to the processor. In the important Appalachian area the crop may be off about 3,459,000 bushels, which means a considerable reduction in processing apples. The Appalachian area is now the nation's largest apple processing center. New York's crop is down 5,000,000 bushels from last year and Michigan's crop is down over 2,000,000 bushels.

The National Canner's Association reports that warehouse stocks of applesauce in early June were over 1,155,000 cases less than one year ago at the same time, in spite of a 7 percent largest pack to sell this year. So Jenkins says it seems reasonable, if the export market is as good as it was last year, to expect slightly bigger apple prices. However, the export market is not likely to remain as accessible as it has been in the past and prices probably will be little improved.

STILL HOUSE

R. H. Matthiessen Sr. and Jr. owners of Still House Hollow Farm Hume, Virginia, recently announced that their farm will hold its annual field day Saturday, August 11th. All people interested in Hereford cattle are invited to attend this big event featuring demonstration and talks by leading Hereford breeders across America.

The program begins at 9:30 a. m. E. D. T., with registration by the Matthiesen's lake and will be followed by a tour of the farms cow herd. On display through out the day with various groups of Still House cattle including cow herd, replacement cattle, herd bulls, show string and cattle being readied for their production sale on December 8. A special attraction will include a display of Quarter Horses from North Wales Farm, Warrenton.

Details of the program will be released later on these event sponsored jointly with the Virginia Hereford Association, Staunton.

The Virginia Hereford Association with Still House Hollow Farm as hosts will hold a President's and Secretarie's clinic on Friday, August 10th. Presidents and Secretaries of every major Hereford Association in the East have been invited to attend and participate in this clinic. Various aspects of running a herd hitting state association will be discussed. Prominent Hereford leaders from several states will lead discussion.

Re-Elected

At a recent meeting of the school Trustee Electoral Board of Appomattox County, T. DeWit Evans was reelected as a member of the board for a 4-year term, beginning July 1. Mr. Evans succeeded the late R. G. Anderson as a member of the board and has been its chairman for the past eight years.

Slight Drop In Apple Crop

A drop of about 1/2 million bushels from last year's apple crop is likely this year in Virginia.

Robert P. Jenkins, assistant horticulturist at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, says Virginia growers are well along with their spray program, trying to bring in a good crop of fruit. They anticipate a harvest of around 20,000,000 bushels.

Hail has caused some damage in various areas, and some varieties, particularly Winesap ,have set light. Fire blight has caused a drop in production in many areas. The important Rappahannock county area is reported to be especially light, with only two or three good crops in the county. Scab also has been a problem in some areas.

Nationally, the apple crop is estimated at 121,264,000 bushels, compared with 121,510,000 bushels last year, but western production will be up, particularly in the state of Washington. The Appalachian Apple Service feels that the distribution of this year's crop will encourage orderly, stable marketing.

NEW YORK, July 9 — How many Appomattox County residents are holding down government jobs? How does the number compare, in proportion to population, with the total so employed in the other areas?

Figures recently released show that relatively more local people are in public jobs—Federal, State and local—than in most parts of the United States.

Out of every 7 employed people locally, one works in some capacity for a branch of government.

The occupational data is revealed by the Department of Commerce in a report on the social and economic characteristics of the population, based on information collected during the 1960 census.

The figures for Appomattox County indicate that 13.5 percent of the working force are public employees, compared with an average of 15.0 percent in the United States and 13.1 percent in the South Atlantic States.

According to actual count, a total of 375 locally are on government payrolls, 232 of them men and 143 of them women. This is exclusive of those employed in agricultural administration and control.

The Census Bureau's reports show that the number of people in public employment in the United States has been growing by leaps and bounds in the last ten years or so. It has increased nearly 50 percent, which is much faster than private employment has been rising.

More than nine million civilians are so engaged, an average a little over six million in 1950.

About 2.5 million of them work for the Federal government and the other 6.5 million for State and local governments. More than a million of the latter, however, are part-timers, such as volunteer firemen and nominally-paid officials.

On the average, throughout the country, there are 46 Federal, State and local employees for every 1,000 people, with the ratio varying widely from section to section.

In the State of Virginia, it is 46 per 1,000 residents.

As to the earnings of public employees, they are at the rate of $43 billion a year, which is nine percent more than they totaled a year ago.
